While motions have been captured and cataloged, none of these motions have been implemented in the software. “The goal of the HyperMotion team was to normalize the player actions from one match to another,” says Fernando Francisco, director of games at EA Sports. “To accomplish this, they need to do the same things as when a player is not wearing a motion capture suit, but the motion capture data recorded comes from a man.” EA Sports has asked the players in “today’s” real match to wear high-definition motion capture suits and play a high-intensity full game. This way, the data collected can be used to test gameplay variables like controls, animations, player movement and hit detection, according to Francisco. The company claims it has been a three-year process to train 22 current and past players. FIFA 22 introduces “HyperMotion Technology,” which uses motion capture data from 22 real-life players playing a complete, high-intensity football match in motion capture suits. The data collected from player movements, tackles, aerial duels and on-ball actions is used to power FIFA 22 gameplay. “We do a lot of precision testing,” Francisco explains. “We test all of the different aspects of how the game works from the controller to how [the player] touches the ball. How does the player’s movement affect the physics of the ball? All of these things. There are so many things we need to consider when we are working on a game, it’s not just one of those ‘here is the new feature’ things. Our whole team in the studio is focused on that.” Several visual improvements have also been made to the gameplay with “FIFA 22.” One of the newest is the player mesh, which models the body and animations more accurately according to Francisco. The goal of the HyperMotion team, which is now called the Football Motion Lab, is to unlock new opportunities for players to dominate the game. “I think we can take it to the next level with the HyperMotion Technology,” Francisco admits. “We want to take full advantage of this opportunity to introduce something new to the player. Like, ‘OK, this technology can do so much more, why not try this now?’ It’s something we think will really change the way people play the

Features Key:

- Lasting Impact – Real player movement and displays make the difference in every phase of the game – and just like in real life players react and adapt to the conditions they face.
- Player Intelligence – New, more accurate intelligence systems monitor not just the main area of the pitch but the full 360 degrees. Using more than 100 individual player attributes, it allows for more precise decision-making, higher levels of skills and player emotions.
- Discover New Tactics – New tactical sequences are triggered by unique, meaningful situations that occur on the pitch, such as a decisive header, a killer counter-attack or a last-ditch tackle.
- Frequently Asked Questions – Plus answers to the most common questions fans have asked.

Made by the people who create the FIFA franchise, the most authentic football ever, EA SPORTS FIFA 22 is the new benchmark in soccer games. Experience it on a variety of platforms including Xbox One, PlayStation®4, and Xbox 360, as well as PlayStation®3 and PC.

The Endzone asks, “Where have you been?” Mario’s lost his smile.

What’s New?

- New atmosphere and player animations that match the desire to entertain and amaze.
- Heat maps on the pitch, which show players where they are most actively involved throughout the game. The visuals will change based on player skills and the condition of the pitch and the ball – for example, long balls will be more dominant in slippery conditions.
- Trusted Ball Physics
- New artificial intelligence (AI) smarts. Players perform significantly better when in possession of the ball than if they are not.
- A Season Long Experience that adds to the live experience of this year’s Europa League, meaning games are more relevant and engaging.
